On Friday, August 31st, Thomas E. Brown, PhD will present “Dealing with ADHD & Related Problems So They Don’t Sabotage College Success” for parents of new students.

In this session Dr. Brown describes dramatic new changes in the science of ADHD and how it can impact the motivation, learning, productivity and daily life of college students. He’ll describe implications of this new view for developing effective treatment tailored to the particular needs of a student.

Landmark College recognizes your desire to gather as much information as possible about Attention-Deficit Disorders, and we hope you will take advantage of this opportunity to hear Dr. Brown and meet other parents of students with these disorders.

Dr. Thomas E. Brown, Ph.D., a member of the Board of Trustees at Landmark College, is an internationally recognized expert on ADHD and the author of an award-winning book: Attention Deficit Disorder: The Unfocused Mind in Children and Adults. He is also the Associate Director of the Clinic for Attention and Related Disorders at Yale University.

Friday, August 31, 2007
10:00 a.m.
Fine Arts Building Auditorium
Landmark College